vi, HIRAM, born , died . According to page 134 "History of Schoharie County, NY." he studied law and went to Western New York.

9-vii, RICHARD, born Dec. 29, 1794.

10-viii, RUTH (ANN), born 1796.

Married (3) Sparta, NY. April 1, 1815 - RHODA HAVENS, widow of Darling Havens, an early settler in Livingston Co., NY. and from Sussex County, New Jersey. He at one time owned a tavern in Sparta and died April 2, 1814. Rhoda had two sons, including Isaac Havens, who died about 1854, and a daughter, Nancy. Daniel and Rhoda were married by Justice of the Peace James Scott, with Joseph Cary and Priscilla McNinch as witnesses. Rhoda Havens Shays lived until after 1853.

Daniel Shays was the son of Patrick Shays, probably born in the North of Ireland about 1724, who married, intention published in Hopkinton, Mass. Nov. 22, 1744, Margaret Dempsey, born Danvers, Mass. Nov. 22, 1725. Not much is known of the family, but there is a record of one of Daniel's younger brothers being christened with the Church of England service.

Before his first marriage Daniel worked for two years, at L-16 per year, as hired man for Nathaniel Brinkley (or Hinchley) at Framingham, Mass. The son of his employer is quoted in Trumbull's History of Northampton as saying that Daniel put in his spare time drilling the village boys in military tactics. He soon moved to Brookfield, where he married a second time and later to Shutesbury, Mass. which was his home when he entered the army at the very outbreak of the Revolution.

He was an Ensign at the battle of Bunker Hill, Stony Point, and at the surrender of Burgoyne. He was commissioned Captain Jan. 1, 1777, commanding a Company of the 5th. Massachusetts, in Colonel Rufus Putnam's Regiment. He resigned from the Army Oct. 14, 1780 and made his home in Pelham, now called Prescott, Mass. His resignation is said to have been forced because of the unfavorable comment aroused by his selling a sword presented to him by the Marquis de Lafayette. His naive excuse was that he already had a sword and that he needed money. Probably not an unusual condition for an Army Officer after several years of war.

He was a member of the Committee of Safety at Pelham Mar. 9, 1781, and both he and his wife were later recorded as members of the 2nd. Presbyterian Church of that town. Financial and political conditions during this period were very unpleasant, the situation being aggravated by the fact that the local governments were in the hands of incompetents, to say the least, who had obtained control while the better element were in the Army. The conditions became so intolerable that in 1786 Daniel Shays headed what amounted to a rebellion against the State of Massachusetts. His forces were mainly embittered farmers protesting against certain laws of the state, particularly in connection with mortgage foreclosures, and against the refusal to expand the issue of paper money as other states had done to an excessive degree, but with apparent good results for the farmers. His insurgents assembled at Springfield and tried to prevent the Supreme Court from sitting. Later they attempted to capture the Arsenal in the same town. At the height of his power he commanded 1100 men, few of whom however were trained soldiers, and when the State sent 4000 troops under Gen. Benjamin Lincoln against him the rebellion collapsed.

Several of the leaders were captured and sentenced to be hanged, but were later pardoned. Daniel escaped the State forces, hiding in the mountains of Vermont for nearly a year, until he too received a pardon accompanied with what amounted to banishment from the state. It is reported that he evaded capture in Vermont because of a warning given him by "one Gilbert", probably a brother-in-law. The American Magazine, vol. XX of 1926 says that after the Rebellion failed he joined a sister (unnamed) at White River. NY. This town is not listed in the 1790 Census, but a Barns, probably the Elijah Barns who married Daniel's sister Margaret, is shown at Canaan Town, Columbia Co., NY. at the next address to Gorham Lane.

The Census of 1790 lists Daniel as a resident of Arlington Town, Bennington Co., Vermont with a household consisting of 2 males over 16, 1 under 16 and 6 females. He is next found in Livingstonville, Schoharie Co., NY. where in 1805 he sold land, partly in Broome township and partly in Patchen Hollow, to David Williams. This Williams was one of the party which captured Major Andree, and was honored by George Washington. In 1812 he made his home with his son, Gilbert, in Bridgewater, Oregon.

County and in 1814 arrived at Sparta township, Livingston Co., NY. in company with a school teacher, Jonathan Weston, later his son-in-law. For three years he squatted on a lot near the Hungerfords, in very poor circumstances. About 1820 he received a pension amounting to $240 per year and bought 12 acres near Scottsburg Village where he lived in a log cabin. This pension was either from the state of Massachusetts or from some special federal fund, as his part in the Rebellion no doubt debarred him from the usual War Pension. In his application his entire fortune is given as $40.62.

While living in Scottsburg he was visited by young Mr. Scott and Willard Fillmore, who later became President of the United States. They described him as an unimpressive, short, stout, talkative gentleman with a quick and sprightly manner. In conservative quarters he was violently hated and accused of being either demented or a traitor. With the passage of time, however, he is being viewed in a more kindly light as an early advocate of "a new deal" resorting to violence only as the more effective defense against legal and political abuses, much as the Western farmers did at tax sales in 1932-3. Two books dealing with his tragic career are "The Duke of Streetsbridge" by Edward Bellamy and "Sprigs of Hemlock" by Walter A. Dyer of Amherst, Mass. 1932. One of the indirect results of Shays' Rebellion was the hastening of the adoption of the Constitution by making the better minds in the country realize the inadequacy of the Articles of Confederation.

Not much is known of Abigail, Daniel's second wife, but there is record of a letter written by her dated Feb. 11, 1779 at Sudbury, Mass. which was perhaps her home during the War. No mention of her is found in New York state and she probably died before 1800;

children, only one known;

11- 1, SUSAN WHITNEY, born June 15, 1802.

Married (2) - Hodge, about whom nothing is known except that the name was common in what later became Monroe County, New York.

Lucy Shays was 12 years old at the time of Shay's Rebellion and could remember the watch kept on her home by the State Officers, while her father was in hiding. She probably went to New York soon after her marriage and Ref. 16 mentions Bezaleel Whitney as a settler in Ogden, now Monroe County before 1817. It is not known when Whitney died, but Lucy and her second husband familiarly known as Grandpa Hodge were living in Eastern Michigan as late as 1837 in very poor circumstances.

It is quite probably that Lucy had children other than Susan (11) and it is suspected that she had a daughter who married a Jenks. The grounds for this suspicion are as follows. Myron Lucian Lane (62), when he lived in Michigan, frequently visited with a John Wesley Jenks, a farmer 16 miles from Grand Rapids. This Jenks is said to have been a first cousin of Myron Lane. As the Lane family is well known the relationship could only be established by John Wesley Jenks being a nephew of Lucy Shays. There were Jenks in Brookfield, where Daniel (1) came from but Mr. Harlan W. Jenks, who was compiling a Jenks Genealogy in 1932 reported that he could not identify this particular John Wesley Jenks.

The information on Daniel Shays, Junior is very scant.
Landmarks of Albany County, NY. by Parker 1897 states that Daniel
(1) came in 1790 to the southwest portion of Rensselaerville, Albany County near Preston Hollow, and that later his son Daniel was Justice of the Peace in that village.

Yates County by Cleveland 1873 states that Daniel Shays, Jr. settled in Barring on and later Italy Hill, where he died leaving a widow and four children. He married Rhoda Patterson, daughter of Robert Patterson, who in 1788 married Mary, daughter of Philip Rigg.

Vol. 2, page 240 of the Lyons Genealogy reports that Samuel Lyon was born in New Jersey Sept. 9, 1780 and that March 11, 1802 he married Eunice Haynes. He moved in 1805 to New Port-ford, near Utica, NY. and had two sons and four daughters. His second daughter, Persis E. married 1824 Hiram Shays, son of Daniel and "Ruth", and grandson of Capt. Daniel Shays.

Very probably Ruth and Rhoda refer to the same person, but there is a possibility that Daniel married (1) Ruth, and (2) Rhoda. Ref. 8 tells of a Ruth Ann Shays, supposed granddaughter of Capt. Daniel, who married Levi Ketcham Sharp in Watkins, NY. in 1853. She may have been a daughter of Daniel (4).

- 27- ix, WILLIAM HENRY, born April 4, 1830.

Gilbert Shays went early to Bridgewater, New York in the corner of Otsego County. His father stayed here for some time in 1815. His wife, despite her early marriage and the hardships of pioneer life, lived to be 83 years old. She died at the home of her son Russell.

vs. JOHNSON (?) WOODWORTH, born 1812

This William Woodworth, according to the Woodworth records, was the only child of Gershom Everts Woodworth and his first wife, whose name is unknown. Gershom married (2^d) before 1781, Phebe Traversa, lived in Granville, NY. 1790, and moved to the north end of Cayuga Lake about 1800. William made his home in Lyons, Wayne County, where he was killed by a falling tree.

The records do not show the date of William's death and are admittedly open to question regarding the number and dates of the children. The data is from letters of William Gershom Woodworth (1797-1890), a cousin of the William who married Susan Shays, in which he tells of visits to Captain Shays. No mention is made of a second marriage for Susan, but other sources give:-

Married (2) Sparta, NY.

- Jonathan Weston

Jonathan Weston was a migratory school teacher with whom Capt. Shays came to Sparta in 1814. He was probably the son of Jonathan Weston, a Revolutionary Soldier, born 1753 Salem, Mass. and who died at Skaneateles, NY. No children by this second marriage are known, but the name of the fifth child in the list above suggests the possibility that it should have been "Jonathan" and that perhaps he was the son of Weston rather than Woodworth.

There is a tradition that Martha Wright was a descendant of Capt. James Cook, the early British circumnavigator, and discoverer in the Pacific Ocean. Capt. Cook was born 1728 in Marton, Cleveland, Yorkshire and killed in the Hawaiian Islands 1779. He married at Barking, Dec. 21, 1762 a Miss Betts, born 1742, died 1835, and had six children, only one of whom, James, the oldest son, reached maturity. James was drowned Jan. 25, 1794 while in the Naval Service. Mrs. Cook and her son James are buried in the Church of St. Andrew the Great at Cambridge.

Myron Lane, as might be suspected from the name he gave his oldest son, was not in agreement with Abraham Lincoln and was opposed to the prevailing Northern opinion during the Civil War. Like his ancestor Daniel (1) he expressed his beliefs with more vigor than diplomacy and became so unpopular with his neighbors that he frequently changed his address.

While living on a farm not far from his home he decided to seek fortune in town. The Detroit market had seen its best days and he had heard that New York, while Maurice established himself in the later Douglas' son Ralph, after graduating from the State, became associated with the Pratt Brothers, who were absorbed by the General Motors Corp. and Detroit, a boom town thanks to the automobile.
